

THE VALUE OF CHARTER JET TRAVEL FOR BUSINESS

Value of Charter Jet Travel for Business

Traveling from one destination to another for business meetings, conferences, and presentations takes a lot of time out of your busy schedule. Even if the actual flight is short, there are still long security lines to stand in and time wasted sitting in the airport waiting for your flight to board. Stop wasting precious hours waiting on commercial flights. Choosing to fly a private jet charter service, rather than the commercial airlines, offers many benefits and advantages to busy business people just like you.

Quick Response Time

Locating a flight that will get you where you need to go quickly when something comes up at the last moment can be a challenging and stressful process. Instead of browsing commercial airline websites, trying to figure out your best option and hoping there is a seat available, just give Cirrus Aviation a call at 702-448-2366. All it takes is one call to receive an immediate quote and make your travel plans.

When your travel needs are urgent, we offer a quick response time. We can have you in the air as quickly as one hour from trip confirmation. Whenever you need to make last minute travel arrangements, Cirrus Aviation is ready to help. We are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week because we know that urgent travel needs do not always appear during standard business hours.

Choose Your Own Departure Time

When you choose to fly via a commercial airline, you are at the mercy of their set flight schedule. Unfortunately, these flight times do not usually line up with when you actually need to travel. When you have an early morning meeting, you have to take an even earlier morning flight. In order to make that very early morning flight, you have to wake up in the middle of the night to allow yourself enough time to check in at the airport. On some occasions, you may even need to take a flight out the night prior.

This problem is exacerbated when traveling between cities that have a limited number of flights per day. For many destinations, there are only one or two flights per day. Because you are forced to take the only option available, you arrive at your destinations hours before you actually need to be there. You end up sitting in the airport or at a coffee shop, checking emails and trying to kill a few hours before your meeting starts.

When you fly on an executive private jet, you have the luxury of choosing your own departure time. Because you are in control of the flight schedule, you can guarantee that you are always exactly where you need to be, exactly when you need to be there.

No More Overnight Stays Due to Inconvenient Flight Times

Sometimes the commercial flight schedule contradicts your business schedule to the point where you must spend an extra night away from home. Your meetings or conferences are scheduled to be over around 6 pm. The problem is the last commercial flight left for your hometown at 4:30 pm. You cannot leave your meeting early, so you have no option but to stay in a hotel overnight to catch the first flight out the next morning.

Or perhaps your only option is the red eye flight, which will leave you jet lagged, groggy, and less productive the next day.

Because most private jet charters are 24/7, you can fly back home no matter what time of day your business obligations end- you select the departure time that works best with your busy schedule. In addition to saving you money on staying in a hotel room an extra night, this takes you back to your home and family sooner.

Land Closer to Your Destination

Because large commercial jets require long runways to takeoff or land, they are limited to traveling between major domestic and international airports that are capable of accommodating them. However, where you need to go may not be located particularly close to a major airport, adding an hour or more of driving to your total travel time.

Private jet charter has access to thousands of airports, both domestic and international. Because private jets can utilize shorter runways, they are able to fly to smaller airports, in addition to the large airports that commercial airlines use. Frequently these smaller airports will be located much closer to your final destination, significantly reducing your driving time. If you are using a taxi for transportation between the airport and meeting location, this will also save you a lot of money.

With commercial flying, it is likely that the airline flies what is called “hub and spoke”, meaning they fly back to a base airport between destinations. Not only does this waste time by adding the extra stop, but it takes you out of your way to the destination as well as offers the chance to have to change planes.

Drive Right Up to Your Plane

Dealing with airport security is one of the most loathed parts of air travel. The long, unpredictable lines force travelers to arrive hours ahead of their scheduled flight time, to guarantee that they have sufficient time to get through the security and check-in process. To ensure that you do not miss your flight, airports typically recommend arriving to check in at least two hours before a domestic flight and at least three hours before an international flight. These hours will be spent hauling your luggage through security or waiting in uncomfortable airport chairs for boarding to begin.

When you book an executive jet charter, you can drive right up to your plane. You will not have to stand in long security lines, check your baggage, or wait on the airline to begin boarding your flight. Instead of arriving at the airport hours before your scheduled flight time, you can show up minutes before we takeoff. The entire process is quick, easy, and efficient.

Flights Are Always On-Time

According to the Bureau of Transportation Statistics, approximately 23.75% of commercial domestic flights in the United States in 2014 were delayed, cancelled, or diverted. Only 0.6% of flights were delayed due to uncontrollable factors, such as weather conditions. Nearly one out of four commercial flights are delayed or cancelled due to a myriad of reasons, such as delays in the boarding process, the previous flight failing to arrive on time, airplane malfunctions, and more. When you are depending on arriving at your destination at a certain time, these delays can be extremely frustrating, inconvenient and burdensome.

When you choose to fly on a private charter jet, you can eliminate nearly all of the problems that frequently cause delays and cancellations; your jet is always waiting for you when you arrive at the airport. Once you arrive, it only requires a matter of minutes for loading and the final preparations to be completed. Because you will not have to deal with time-consuming delays, you never have to worry about arriving at your destination on time when you choose private jet charter for your business travel needs.

Travel Comfortably

Anyone who has flown on a commercial plane knows how uncomfortably tight the seating arrangements are. Even in business class or first class, your space is quite limited and you become well acquainted with your neighbors throughout the course of the flight. With only a tiny desk to work on, extremely limited legroom, and a seat that only reclines ever so slightly, it can be hard to get any work done or be comfortable on a commercial flight. In the event that you need to stretch your legs or use the lavatory, you inadvertently disturb your fellow passengers as you attempt to navigate the small aisles.

At Cirrus Aviation, our fleet is comprised of the following aircraft - the Beechjet 400A, the Learjet 35, the Cessna Citation III, and the Lear 60. All of our aircraft can accommodate up to seven passengers, with the Cessna Citation III having seating for up to eight passengers. These luxurious private jets have a large cabin so that you can travel comfortably. You will have plenty of space and legroom to relax and enjoy your flight in your plush, comfortable leather seat. If you need to get up for a moment to stretch, there is room to do so. When you travel comfortably in an executive charter jet, you will always arrive feeling relaxed and refreshed.

Travel in Privacy

Working on confidential business projects is almost impossible when you have other passengers on the plane looking over your shoulder. When you fly with Cirrus Aviation, you will travel in privacy, allowing you the freedom to work on your important project or practice your presentation. If you are traveling with business partners, you have the option to make important plans and discuss sensitive business information in-flight.

On the other hand, maybe you prefer to travel in peace and quiet. When flying on a commercial plane with hundreds of other passengers, you never know when you will be seated near a rude, noisy neighbor or a baby that screams the entire flight. When you use one of our private charter jets, your flight will always be quiet. Whether you prefer to read, watch a movie, or take a nap, you can arrive at your destination refreshed and ready to tackle what you came to accomplish.

Cirrus Aviation would like to thank you for your interest in private jet charter services. We look forward to traveling with you soon.
